

papers yesterday. No other newspaper or daily English publication of any kind can equal THE WORLD in circulation.

PRICE ONE CENT.

EXTRA.

2 O'CLOCK.

16 BODIES.

Four More Found in the Hotel Royal Ruins To-Day.

Those of Ten Women and Six Men Taken Out So Far.

Six Only of These Have as Yet Been Identified.

Two of the Women Died Clasped in Each Other's Arms.

The List of Those Missing and Unaccounted for Swelled to 74.

BODIES RECOVERED..... 16 IDENTIFIED..... 6 MISSING AND UNACCOUNTED FOR 74

Between midnight and the hour of going to press four more bodies were dug out of the ruins. These increased the list of bodies recovered to sixteen.

There are probably many more buried under the heaps of debris, which the workmen have not reached with their picks and shovels, and which will be recovered within the next twenty-four hours.

Three other bodies were positively identified at the Morgue this morning. They were those of Miss Sarah Blake, of Stamford, Conn.; Mrs. J. Cohen, of Toronto, Canada; and Lewis Levy, of London, Ontario.

THE WORK MAY BE FINISHED TO-DAY. Contractor Galligan, who has charge of the excavating of the ruins, says that he will probably complete his work to-day.

During the whole night the ghostly search for the dead went on without interruption, except when a new body was found, and then there was a cessation until the charred and blackened corpse was removed from the pit.

Great progress was made. The scene was lighted up with electric and calcium lights, which made the work as easy as it would have been in broad day.

The derricks and donkey-engine were of great assistance, and load after load of rubbish was hoisted out of the cellar and dumped upon the great piles of debris which now block the site of the ruined hotel.

THIS MAY MAY GIVE UP MANY DEAD. At daybreak the morning fresh force of seventy-five workmen came on duty and the work took a fresh start.

At that hour the cellar underneath the office and dining-room of the hotel had been very nearly cleared of rubbish.

There was still a great mass remaining, however, in the further end of the excavation over against the wall of the Fortieth street portion of the building, which is still standing.

It is behind this wall that the elevator shaft was located, and immediately over which the upper hallways converged. There, it is expected, the greatest number of bodies will be found.

Through the burned doorways and other openings in this wall can be seen tons of bricks and mortar and charred pieces of beams and rafters piled upon each other to a height of at least twenty-five feet.

DANGER FROM SHARP WALLS. Hanging overhead are dangerous-looking fragments of brickwork and partitions, which seem ready to fall and bury the laborers at any moment.

No attempt will be made to remove this rubbish until the cellarway in the corner portion of the building under the big dining-room has been perfectly cleared.

Then the threatening walls will be pulled down, and the diggers will be able to work with safety.

ran. Three were women and the other was that of a man.

ALL FOUR CORPSES CHAINED TO A CRIB. They must have been in the upper part of the building when they met the death, for their bodies were all burned and charred to a crisp and frightfully twisted and contorted.

In all cases the extremities were burned off, and not a particle of clothing was found upon them except in one instance. This was the body of a handsomely formed woman who had a plaid shawl wound about her neck, and underneath this was found a scarlet silk which had evidently been worn about the neck with a string.

THOUGHT TO BE THAT OF KATE REILLY. It is surmised that this may be the body of Kate Reilly, the chambermaid, who was the sweetheart of Engineer Herbert Harding. She was known to be of a religious turn and a devout Catholic.

These bodies were found lying in a group, and were discovered by one of the Italians who turned up a blackened arm with a stroke of his pick.

Deputy J. A. Lehman, of the Coroner's office, who was on duty all night long at the ruins, was called over.

ARM TWINED ABOUT EACH OTHER. The dirt and rubble was carefully scooped away and the bodies discovered. The three women had the stumps of their arms entwined about each other, and had probably died in the midst of the flames in this position. Piled on top of them were the remains of a bed and mattress.

This find was made just before 4 o'clock this morning and it took nearly two hours to get all four of the bodies out and put them into the boxes.

The intense heat to which they had been subjected had literally roasted them through and through, and it was extremely difficult to remove them from the rubbish without dismembering them.

The night was sickening and disgusting, and even the Italian laborers seemed to recoil from it in horror.

COFFINS FILLED IN THE STREET. Out on Fortieth street was a pile of new boxes from the Morgue. Four of them were carried into the excavation and the bodies placed in them carefully.

The dead wagon made two trips to the Morgue and then returned to take up its stand in Fortieth street.

PICKS OF DEBRIS HIDE THE WORKMEN. Twenty-five policemen, under the charge of Roundman Beck, of the Twenty-sixth Precinct, had no difficulty in keeping the crowd of spectators well out of bounds.

The mountains of rubbish which are heaped up on the roadway and on the pavements on all sides of the ruins shut the workmen out from view completely.

Only those who ride by in the Elevated railroad train can get a passing glimpse of the death pit.

Chief Giquel and the captains from several companies remained at the scene last night to supervise the work of the searchers.

Dr. Donih, of the Coroner's office, and Coroner Shea himself were also on hand during a greater part of the night.

FIRE-MARSHAL MITCHELL'S INVESTIGATION. Fire Marshal Mitchell has instituted a searching investigation into the origin of the fire which caused the disaster.

He has learned from several persons, including Michael Cahill, a porter, and Jean Nect, the chef, that there was a pot of fat left boiling on the kitchen range on Saturday night, and he believes that this will account for the sudden outbreak of the flames.

The fire was too hot, and the grease boiled over, and caught fire. A servant girl known only as Nellie, says that she went into the kitchen late Saturday night and found the gas blazing high and a hot fire in the range.

SUPT. BRADY VERBOS THE HONOR. Supt. Brady, of the Bureau of Buildings, insists that he has no reason to believe from the report of the fire that the Hotel Royal was not well and properly supplied with fire-escapes in accordance with the law.

The owners of the building were twice ordered to provide escapes, and each time they complied with the order, though it was after considerable delay, and on one occasion the attorney of the Department had to bring proceedings against the owner to compel him to put in the escapes.

THE FIRE-ESCAPES WERE WORTHLESS. The undersigned, however, is of the opinion that the escapes were absolutely useless when the need for them came, and that the ropes, which were supposed to be in every room in the house, were utterly unserviceable in many instances, and in the greater number of the rooms could not be found at all.

Besides this there is nothing in the report made to the Bureau of Buildings by the inspectors which would go to show that the Hotel Royal was regarded as in any way dangerous, although recent events have shown it to have been a perfect death-trap.

OWNER ISRAEL'S ESTIMATE OF HIS LOSS. Heyman Israel has estimated the value of the Hotel Royal property at $120,000. He appears to be insured for $100,000 insurance on the building, $14,000 on the rentals and $10,000 on machinery.

Proprietor Meares, who owned the furniture and contents of the hotel, is protected from loss by an insurance of $71,500.

BODIES AT THE MORGUE. Those in Coffins Nos. 1, 4 and 6 Identified This Morning.

For the second time in many years the Morgue was kept open last night until midnight for the purpose of receiving the remains of the unfortunate who lost their lives in the Hotel Royal fire.

Up to 9 o'clock this morning sixteen bodies had been brought to the Morgue from the ruins, four of these since midnight.

Of the total number ten were those of women and the remaining six those of men. Only three of the sixteen bodies had been positively identified up to 9 o'clock, and in the case of two others, those in Coffins Nos. 1 and 4, a partial identification was made.

A half-boy at the hotel said he felt sure these two bodies were those of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis. Those positively identified were Nos. 3, 7 and 8. The first was that of H. J. Levy, the master of the hotel. The second was that of A. A. T. Wadsworth, the New Haven Oddfellows' identified by relatives at the Morgue late last night.

The body in coffin No. 7 was last night identified as that of Mary Begley, a chambermaid. Mrs. Bridget Begley, a sister-in-law, and Dr. Edward Fagan, of 301 Sixth avenue, recognized in the blackened remains the features of the missing chambermaid. The body was removed to Mrs. Bridget Begley's home at 9 o'clock to-day.

MISS BLAKE'S BODY IDENTIFIED BY A BROTHER. Shortly after 10 o'clock this morning the body of the woman in coffin No. 9 was identified as that of Miss Sarah Blake, fifty years old, of Stamford, Conn.

Charles Blake, her brother, and Miss Nellie Kendall, of Plainville, Mass., her niece, accompanied by Henry Glassford, of this city, called at the Morgue and asked to view the remains of the woman in coffin No. 9. They said that from the description given in the newspapers of the chased gold ring found on the third finger of the left hand they believed the body was Miss Blake's. She came to this city on Saturday and accompanied Mr. Glassford to the theatre that evening.

Kendall positively identified the ring, but she had not the courage to look at the horribly burned corpse. A set of false upper teeth found in the woman's mouth corresponded with Miss Kendall's description of her aunt's teeth, and Deputy Warden Rickard concluded that the identification was positive.

Miss Blake, however, was not so sure as was Miss Kendall. She said she had a ring of her own which she had worn in the theatre. She was those of her sister, and he went away undecided whether or not to claim the body.

The unfortunate woman was a native of Sheltonville, Mass., and until Saturday worked in a hat factory in Stamford, Conn. By appointment she met Glassford at the grand central depot Saturday evening.

Glassford secured accommodations for her at the Hotel Royal late Saturday night, and bade her good night a few minutes after 12 o'clock. Glassford thought that Miss Blake occupied a room on the fourth floor of the hotel fronting on Fortieth street.

Bodies Nos. 2 and 4, unknown woman and man, supposed to be those of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis, of Mount Vernon, were photographed this morning.

NEW IDENTIFICATION OF BODIES 1 AND 4. At 11 o'clock Archibald Jacobs, of 1215 Broadway, made a new and more positive identification of the bodies in coffins No. 1 and 4, which were the bodies of the Hotel Royal had said were those of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis.

Mr. Jacobs recognized the corpse in coffin No. 1 as that of his sister, Mrs. J. Cohen, twenty-three years old, of Toronto, Canada. She was, he said, a native of Poland, and came to this country only two years ago. Her husband is in Toronto. She came to New York a week ago.

The body in coffin No. 4, Mr. Jacobs said, once declared to be that of Lewis Levy, of London, Canada, who had come to the city at about the same time as his sister.

Jacobs hadn't known that Levy was stopping at the Hotel Royal, but he didn't think it could possibly be mistaken in his identification.

He left the Morgue to notify Mrs. Cohen's husband of her fate and said he would get other friends of Levy's to look at the body in coffin No. 4.

TWO OF THEM MAY DIE. The Condition of Walter Yates and Miss Etta Green Still Critical.

Walter Yates is the only one of those injured in the Hotel Royal fire who still remains in Bellevue Hospital. He is suffering from burns and shocks, and was still in a critical condition this morning.

He improved so much during the night, however, that the hospital surgeons now say he has a fighting chance for his life.

Mrs. Meares, wife of the proprietor of the Hotel Royal, was removed from Bellevue to the Post-Graduate Hospital yesterday. At that institution to-day it was said that she was doing as well as could be expected.

She is suffering from shock and a number of contusions, but will pull through all right.

SHE IS MISS ETTA GREEN. The identity of the young woman who is lying at the New York Hospital with a fractured skull and disfigured by burns and bruises, who jumped from the fourth floor of the hotel, has been established.

She is Miss Etta Green, and was the cashier of the Sturtevant House. Some people from the hotel identified her Sunday night, but the hospital authorities would not give out her name.

Miss Green, who was a remarkably pretty young girl, lived with some friends on the West Side.

Her condition is not to be extremely critical, and she is not expected to live.

If she does she will be disfigured for life, for her face is terribly burned.

SEARCHING FOR THE DEAD. Many Bodies Thought to Be Lying Near the Elevator Shaft.

Four more bodies were taken from the ruins after 1 o'clock this morning, making sixteen that had been recovered up to 7 a.m. when the night gang of laborers went off.

A double force of men, numbering 175, took their places and continued digging for victims.

The force was increased by Contractor Galligan by order of President Purdy and Chief Brimmer, of the Fire department, so that the work would be hurried along.

The cellar where the corner building stood was almost cleared this forenoon, but there is a good deal of debris to be removed yet before the site of the elevator shaft can be reached.

The main stairway was near the shaft, where the fire raged most violently, and it is believed by the firemen that nearly all who tried to escape by the stairs perished in the flames at that spot, and that most of the bodies will be found there.

Coroner Shea, his deputy, Dr. Donih, and J. A. Lehman, of the Coroner's office, were on duty at the scene all night to superintend the removal of the charred corpses.

THE THIRTEENTH TAKEN OUT. The thirteenth body was taken out at 4 o'clock this morning. It was the frame, or rather part of a frame, of what had once been a man.

The lower limbs had been burned off. The features were, of course, unrecognizable.

The only clue to the identity of the woman is furnished by the teeth, which are artificial.

The body was lying on the side near the shapeless form of a man, her arms outstretched as if she had been clinging to him. Perhaps the shapeless mass of burned flesh beside her was that of a hero who had tried to rescue her.

Gently the bodies were lifted into pine coffins and taken to the Morgue, the one to be known as No. 13 and the other as No. 14. The legs and part of the head of the man were missing.

BODIES 15 AND 16 THOSE OF WOMEN. Half an hour later, at 4:45, the workmen came upon two more bodies, two women clasped in each other's arms.

The face of the one which will be known as No. 15 is still recognizable, but the body is badly burned and the feet and hands are gone.

No. 16 can be identified. The features are in a fairly good state of preservation. The teeth are irregular.

All the bodies were sprinkled with a disinfectant. An employee of the Board of Health and then removed to the Morgue.

A big crowd of spectators at the scene today than yesterday, but they could see very little, except from the north side of the ruins.

The workmen having piled up the debris mountain high on the sixth avenue side, which shuts out all view.

The police had little trouble in keeping back the men, but the women were eager to get close to the ruins, and frequently tried to break through the lines. They made a lot of excuses to pass the bluecoats.

Most of them either lived or worked in the "lost block."

FIREMEN ASSISTING IN THE SEARCH. The firemen who distinguished themselves so nobly at the fire have been on duty continuously. Battalion Chief Giquel was on the scene for thirty-six hours before he took some rest.

He was on duty for four or five hours' sleep he was then directed his men to search for bodies.

Chief Brimmer was also present with a detail of men from Engine Company 26, of West Third-street, and Engine Company 34, of West Forty-seventh street.

The members of Fire Patrol No. 3, on West Third-street, were also on duty. The firemen, and a vigilant policeman standing in the pit where the laborers are digging, keeps an eye on all valuables found.

LETTERS ADDRESSED TO MISS W. R. LEWIS. This morning a gold watch, a silver butter-knife, an iron box containing a package of letters addressed to "Miss W. R. Lewis" and a corset belonging to body No. 12 were unearthed.

There was great excitement in the pit about 9 o'clock. James Rosier, of 230 West Third-street, one of the diggers, felt forward on his face, striking on a stone, which made the blood rush from his mouth.

He was looking for a good thing. The same man fell in a fit while at work yesterday. This morning he returned, looking very weak, and Contractor Galligan was going to send him home. He said he must have work, however, as his family was starving, and he was allowed to resume. An hour later he was again seized with a fit. He was removed to the hospital.

KNIGHTS OF THE DEATH ROLL. There was loud complaint among residents in the neighborhood because the ill-smelling debris taken from the ruins and piled on the street had not been removed.

Contractor Galligan said that he was paid to dig for bodies only, it was the business of the owner of the insurance companies to have the rubbish carted away. Chief Giquel was of the same opinion.

The burned timbers, bricks and mortar now cover the sidewalk and street almost to the car tracks on the Sixth avenue side and from sidewalk to sidewalk on Fortieth street. The Fire department thinks it is the duty of the Department to remove the debris.

THE DEATH ROLL. Ten of the Sixteen Bodies Taken Out Still Unidentified.

COFFIN NO. 1, WOMAN, about forty years of age, fractured skull, suffocated death. Slight traces of clothing. Full-length chemise of black silk, heavy gold band ring on finger. Supposed to have jumped out of window and fallen on to the street.

COFFIN NO. 2, WOMAN, about twenty-five years of age, fractured skull, suffocated death. Slight traces of clothing. Full-length chemise of black silk, heavy gold band ring on finger. Supposed to have jumped out of window and fallen on to the street.

COFFIN NO. 3, MAN, about thirty-five years of age, heavy dark-brown coat, suffocated death. Slight traces of clothing. Full-length chemise of black silk, heavy gold band ring on finger. Supposed to have jumped out of window and fallen on to the street.

COFFIN NO. 4, MAN, very good looking, about forty years of age, head bald, black hair, full beard, full mustache, in color. Short side-whiskers for about an inch under the ears; brown mustache. Wore a dark suit, with a pair of trousers and a pair of shoes. Supposed to have jumped out of window and fallen on to the street.

COFFIN NO. 5, WOMAN, body so charred as to be unrecognizable. A red and black striped shawl was wound tightly about the neck and shoulders, and underneath was found a scarlet of chert, suspended by a gold chain to the neck. The chain was held under the shawl. The body was that of a newly married woman, and apparently young.

COFFIN NO. 6, WOMAN, body so charred as to be unrecognizable. A red and black striped shawl was wound tightly about the neck and shoulders, and underneath was found a scarlet of chert, suspended by a gold chain to the neck. The chain was held under the shawl. The body was that of a newly married woman, and apparently young.

COFFIN NO. 7, WOMAN, body so charred as to be unrecognizable. A red and black striped shawl was wound tightly about the neck and shoulders, and underneath was found a scarlet of chert, suspended by a gold chain to the neck. The chain was held under the shawl. The body was that of a newly married woman, and apparently young.

COFFIN NO. 8, WOMAN, body so charred as to be unrecognizable. A red and black striped shawl was wound tightly about the neck and shoulders, and underneath was found a scarlet of chert, suspended by a gold chain to the neck. The chain was held under the shawl. The body was that of a newly married woman, and apparently young.

COFFIN NO. 9, WOMAN, body so charred as to be unrecognizable. A red and black striped shawl was wound tightly about the neck and shoulders, and underneath was found a scarlet of chert, suspended by a gold chain to the neck. The chain was held under the shawl. The body was that of a newly married woman, and apparently young.

COFFIN NO. 10, MAN, body so charred as to be unrecognizable. A red and black striped shawl was wound tightly about the neck and shoulders, and underneath was found a scarlet of chert, suspended by a gold chain to the neck. The chain was held under the shawl. The body was that of a newly married woman, and apparently young.

COFFIN NO. 11, MAN, body so charred as to be unrecognizable. A red and black striped shawl was wound tightly about the neck and shoulders, and underneath was found a scarlet of chert, suspended by a gold chain to the neck. The chain was held under the shawl. The body was that of a newly married woman, and apparently young.

COFFIN NO. 12, MAN, body so charred as to be unrecognizable. A red and black striped shawl was wound tightly about the neck and shoulders, and underneath was found a scarlet of chert, suspended by a gold chain to the neck. The chain was held under the shawl. The body was that of a newly married woman, and apparently young.

COFFIN NO. 13, WOMAN, body so charred as to be unrecognizable. A red and black striped shawl was wound tightly about the neck and shoulders, and underneath was found a scarlet of chert, suspended by a gold chain to the neck. The chain was held under the shawl. The body was that of a newly married woman, and apparently young.

COFFIN NO. 14, WOMAN, body so charred as to be unrecognizable. A red and black striped shawl was wound tightly about the neck and shoulders, and underneath was found a scarlet of chert, suspended by a gold chain to the neck. The chain was held under the shawl. The body was that of a newly married woman, and apparently young.

COFFIN NO. 15, WOMAN, body so charred as to be unrecognizable. A red and black striped shawl was wound tightly about the neck and shoulders, and underneath was found a scarlet of chert, suspended by a gold chain to the neck. The chain was held under the shawl. The body was that of a newly married woman, and apparently young.

COFFIN NO. 16, WOMAN, body so charred as to be unrecognizable. A red and black striped shawl was wound tightly about the neck and shoulders, and underneath was found a scarlet of chert, suspended by a gold chain to the neck. The chain was held under the shawl. The body was that of a newly married woman, and apparently young.

COFFIN NO. 17, WOMAN, body so charred as to be unrecognizable. A red and black striped shawl was wound tightly about the neck and shoulders, and underneath was found a scarlet of chert, suspended by a gold chain to the neck. The chain was held under the shawl. The body was that of a newly married woman, and apparently young.

COFFIN NO. 18, WOMAN, body so charred as to be unrecognizable. A red and black striped shawl was wound tightly about the neck and shoulders, and underneath was found a scarlet of chert, suspended by a gold chain to the neck. The chain was held under the shawl. The body was that of a newly married woman, and apparently young.

COFFIN NO. 19, WOMAN, body so charred as to be unrecognizable. A red and black striped shawl was wound tightly about the neck and shoulders, and underneath was found a scarlet of chert, suspended by a gold chain to the neck. The chain was held under the shawl. The body was that of a newly married woman, and apparently young.

COFFIN NO. 20, WOMAN, body so charred as to be unrecognizable. A red and black striped shawl was wound tightly about the neck and shoulders, and underneath was found a scarlet of chert, suspended by a gold chain to the neck. The chain was held under the shawl. The body was that of a newly married woman, and apparently young.

COFFIN NO. 21, WOMAN, body so charred as to be unrecognizable. A red and black striped shawl was wound tightly about the neck and shoulders, and underneath was found a scarlet of chert, suspended by a gold chain to the neck. The chain was held under the shawl. The body was that of a newly married woman, and apparently young.

COFFIN NO. 22, WOMAN, body so charred as to be unrecognizable. A red and black striped shawl was wound tightly about the neck and shoulders, and underneath was found a scarlet of chert, suspended by a gold chain to the neck. The chain was held under the shawl. The body was that of a newly married woman, and apparently young.

COFFIN NO. 23, WOMAN, body so charred as to be unrecognizable. A red and black striped shawl was wound tightly about the neck and shoulders, and underneath was found a scarlet of chert, suspended by a gold chain to the neck. The chain was held under the shawl. The body was that of a newly married woman, and apparently young.

COFFIN NO. 24, WOMAN, body so charred as to be unrecognizable. A red and black striped shawl was wound tightly about the neck and shoulders, and underneath was found a scarlet of chert, suspended by a gold chain to the neck. The chain was held under the shawl. The body was that of a newly married woman, and apparently young.

COFFIN NO. 25, WOMAN, body so charred as to be unrecognizable. A red and black striped shawl was wound tightly about the neck and shoulders, and underneath was found a scarlet of chert, suspended by a gold chain to the neck. The chain was held under the shawl. The body was that of a newly married woman, and apparently young.

COFFIN NO. 26, WOMAN, body so charred as to be unrecognizable. A red and black striped shawl was wound tightly about the neck and shoulders, and underneath was found a scarlet of chert, suspended by a gold chain to the neck. The chain was held under the shawl. The body was that of a newly married woman, and apparently young.

COFFIN NO. 27, WOMAN, body so charred as to be unrecognizable. A red and black striped shawl was wound tightly about the neck and shoulders, and underneath was found a scarlet of chert, suspended by a gold chain to the neck. The chain was held under the shawl. The body was that of a newly married woman, and apparently young.

COFFIN NO. 28, WOMAN, body so charred as to be unrecognizable. A red and black striped shawl was wound tightly about the neck and shoulders, and underneath was found a scarlet of chert, suspended by a gold chain to the neck. The chain was held under the shawl. The body was that of a newly married woman, and apparently young.

COFFIN NO. 29, WOMAN, body so charred as to be unrecognizable. A red and black striped shawl was wound tightly about the neck and shoulders, and underneath was found a scarlet of chert, suspended by a gold chain to the neck. The chain was held under the shawl. The body was that of a newly married woman, and apparently young.

COFFIN NO. 30, WOMAN, body so charred as to be unrecognizable. A red and black striped shawl was wound tightly about the neck and shoulders, and underneath was found a scarlet of chert, suspended by a gold chain to the neck. The chain was held under the shawl. The body was that of a newly married woman, and apparently young.

COFFIN NO. 31, WOMAN, body so charred as to be unrecognizable. A red and black striped shawl was wound tightly about the neck and shoulders, and underneath was found a scarlet of chert, suspended by a gold chain to the neck. The chain was held under the shawl. The body was that of a newly married woman, and apparently young.

COFFIN NO. 32, WOMAN, body so charred as to be unrecognizable. A red and black striped shawl was wound tightly about the neck and shoulders, and underneath was found a scarlet of chert, suspended by a gold chain to the neck. The chain was held under the shawl. The body was that of a newly married woman, and apparently young.

COFFIN NO. 33, WOMAN, body so charred as to be unrecognizable. A red and black striped shawl was wound tightly about the neck and shoulders, and underneath was found a scarlet of chert, suspended by a gold chain to the neck. The chain was held under the shawl. The body was that of a newly married woman, and apparently young.

DIVE SHUTTERS UP.

Five in the List Have Bars Open—Annexes All Closed.

Tom Stevenson, of "The Slide," to Be Tried To-Morrow.

Tom Gould, Carey Welch and the Rest to Follow at the Bar.

NEW YORK'S OUTLAWS. (A Table Subject to Daily Change.)

IN THE PENITENTIARY. BILLY MCGLOVY. AUGUST GUDDY.

TO MURDER. JOHN KELLY. JOHN KELLY. JOHN